CREATIVITY:

STEALING WITH INTEGRITY

Jim Jarmusch - filmmaker, musician... Interview quoted in MovieMaker
Magazine #53 - January 22, 2004

"Nothing is original. Steal from anywhere that resonates with inspiration or fuels your imagination. Devour old films, new films, music, books, paintings, photographs, poems, dreams, random conversations, architecture, bridges, street signs, trees, clouds, bodies of water, light and shadows. Select only things to steal from that speak directly to your soul. If you do this, your work (and theft) will be authentic. Authenticity is invaluable; originality is non-existent. And don't bother concealing your thievery—celebrate it if you feel like it. In any case, always remember what Jean-Luc Godard said: "It's not where you take things from—it's where you take them to."

Denham Grierson says:

"One of the dangers afflicting us in modern life is that all events become the same, indistinguishable from all other events, flowing together to form an undistinguished, even monotonous pattern. No spaces are observed, no vigils set, no silences held. Nothing in particular is honoured. As a consequence, everything in general is in danger of losing its meaning. That, after all, is the significance of Sunday: a day when we stop, and recover, and reflect and remember who God is, and therefore who we are in the light of our confession to be his children.

But we need to make our lives deeper and richer in ceremonial tradition. Only in such ways is the meaning of our lives enhanced, the significance of our human journey recognised and upheld. It has been said of our present generation in contrast to those of other generations: 'They were experience rich and stimuli poor; we are experience poor and stimuli rich.' We would add: and as a consequence, without meaning.

It is time we began to attend to such things, intentionally, deliberately, intelligently. Perhaps the first step is to look at the rituals we honour and which define us – or, more accurately, those we neglect because we have ceased to notice them.

Is it not time in relation to this matter of rituals that we asked each other, 'Did you observe that?' "
